Founder of Zetta Nicole' Girls

Jennifer Nicole Williams is the Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Zetta Nicole' Girls Corporation. Jennifer was born November 30, 1979 in Gary, In. She now resides in Merrillville, In. She has one son by the name of Micah Bynum. Jennifer is the oldest out of all, of her siblings on both sides of her family. She has been very, passionate for many years as to forming her very, own nonprofit organization. She knew she wanted to work with young girls but did not know how to make things happen. Jennifer remember as a young girl being taught that as a young lady when you leave the house always have yourself together. Those values she has always abided by in her everyday life as an adult. Being able to pour into another young girl has always been something she wanted to set out to accomplish. One of her biggest mentors in her life is her grandmother Marzetta W Patterson. The name Zetta is paying homage to one of the greatest mentors in her life which is her grandmother. She has taken the lessons that she has learned from her grandmother and has become a strong, confident, and independent woman. Jennifer has endured many hardships, and setbacks in her life. She wants to be able to let the next young girl know that you can make it through anything that life throws at you, and still be standing tall with your head held high. One of her favorite quotes that she lives by is:

“It's not where you start, it's how you finish”.

Through the various mentorship programs that are put into place, she plans to accomplish what she has set out to do. Being a helping hand at a young girl transitioning to an adult woman with Style, Class, Grace, and Perseverance. Jennifer plans on making sure that Zetta Nicole' Girls Corporation will feel like a second home to the young girls.
